

God's work. Our hands.

This “tag line” for the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America helps us celebrate the call and challenge that is ours as we seek to do mission and ministry together at St. Armands Key Lutheran Church.

God. The most important message we have is not about ourselves. We boast not in St. Armands Key Lutheran Church (SAKLC), but first and last in the Lord. It's not about us, it's all about Him. When our focus is on God, be it in our worship, our education, our outreach, or our fellowship, the Holy Spirit will strengthen our faith and reward our witness.

God's work. Make no mistake about it; God is at work among us. Through Word and Sacrament, God works to make his love known to us through Jesus Christ. Strengthened by God's Word, revealed fully in Jesus Christ, we are called and inspired to make God's work our work.

Our hands. So many hands join together to do God's work at SAKLC. Enriched and strengthened by the diversity of hands, our congregation finds unity around our mission statement that calls us to be a “family of Christians celebrating God's love, growing together in Jesus Christ, and sharing this love and faith with the community and the world.”

God's work. Our hands. As our presiding bishop of the ELCA, Mark Hanson, reminds us: “We do God's work, not because God needs us to do so, but because our neighbor does.”

As we join hands in ministry at St. Armands Key Lutheran Church, we open our hands in hospitality to all those around us, near and far, as we reach out to share the good news of Jesus Christ!
